The hobo seem to be partial to Danielson, dropping off freight here by the half dozen and eventually land before the town court. Chief Grimshaw gave half a dozen of them a fast chase out of town soon after their arrival on a freight early Wednesday morning.

Police Dogs on Murderer's Trail.
Jonni I. Baer's police dogs were again called into service Wednesday to trail John A. Elliott, the Thompson murderer. A telephone call to the Baer kennels at East Killingly at about 11 o'clock Wednesday morning requested the service of the animals and a few of the pack of 35 now at the place were hurried into an automobile and rushed over on the Rhode Island border, whence another report that Elliott had been seen came over the wires.

All the border section was alive with interest Wednesday over the hunt of the murderer and no dog men were willing to take the chance involved in a hunt for the criminal. Many reports came that Elliott had been sighted at points along the Connecticut-Rhode Island line in the eastern section of the town of Killingly, Putnam and Thompson, but investigation proved that these clues were without foundation, although it is believed that Elliott has been unable to make his way out of this section of the country. Heavily armed men spent Wednesday guarding miles of this out-lying territory.

Most of them resolved to take Elliott dead or alive, and the choice between bringing him under guard or in a casket.

MAJOR WM. F. BIDWELL DEAD.
Native of Norwich, For Twelve Years Postmaster at Dayville.

Major William F. Bidwell died at his home in Dayville Wednesday morning. He had been ill for several months, his condition becoming so critical a few weeks ago that he was taken to a Hartford hospital for treatment. For the past week he has been lying between life and death with all hope for his recovery gone.

Major Bidwell was one of the best known citizens of Killingly. For twenty years, up to a few months ago, he was postmaster at the Killingly (Dayville) office, his retirement from office being due to the appointment by President Wilson of Patrick Riley, a democrat, as his successor.

Major Bidwell was not in the best of health at the time of his retirement and though he was thereafter relieved from business cares his condition gradually became more alarming and the best medical skill could not avail against the inroads of his ailment.

Mr. Bidwell was born in Norwich on September 22, 1855, the son of Enoch G. and Abbie Richards Bidwell. He was educated in the schools of that city and eventually engaged in the shoe business there. In 1892 he married Miss Elizabeth Sayles, eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sabin L. Sayles, prominent residents of this town, and soon afterwards came to take his home in Dayville, where he has since resided.

For a time he was engaged in the grain business in Dayville and after a few years became a hardware merchant. Mr. Bidwell was one of the best known of the military men of the state. As an officer, he was first captain of G company, Norwich, what is now known as the old Third Connecticut Infantry. Later he became a major of the regiment on the staff of General Hays and still later was inspector of small arms practice on the brigade staff with the rank of major. When Colonel Henry J. Thayer came into the command of the regiment he named Major Bidwell as his adjutant. Major Bidwell resigned from the service in November, 1902.

Major Bidwell leaves his wife, his mother and a sister, Mrs. Frank L. Woodward, both residents of Norwich, and a brother, Frederick N. Bidwell, Passaic, N. J.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water
Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

Why is man and woman, half the time, feeling nervous, despondent, worried; some days headachy, dull and unstrung; some days really incapacitated by illness?

If we all would practice inside-bathing, make a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the sour, half-sick, anemic-looking souls with pasty, muddy complexions we should see crowds of happy, healthy, rosy-cheeked people everywhere. The reason is that the human system does not rid itself each day of all the waste which it accumulates under our present mode of living. For every ounce of food and drink taken into the system nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out, else it ferments and forms poisonous-like poisons which are absorbed into the blood.

Just as necessary as it is to clean the ashes from the furnace each day, before the fire will burn bright and hot, so we must each morning clear the inside organs of the previous day's accumulation of indigestible waste and body toxins. Men and women, whether sick or well, are advised to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of washing out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the indigestible material, waste, acids and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Millions of people who had their turn at constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, nervous days and sleepless nights have become real cranks about the morning inside-bath. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will not cost much at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate to anyone its cleansing, sweetening and freshening effect upon the system.

HUNT FOR MURDERER

John Elliott's Employer Believes He Has Succeeded—Had Declared He Was Sick of Life—Funeral of Burt Pettis and His Daughter to be Held This Afternoon—Elliott Served Six Years for Shooting Rhode Island Girl.

(Special to The Bulletin.)
Thompson, Conn., May 3.—That John A. Elliott, murderer of Burt Pettis and his daughter, was found dead by some one of his many pursuers was the prophecy made Wednesday afternoon by Miss Ann Cunningham, at whose country place at West Thompson crossing the man has been employed off and on during the past nine years.

"I think he is already dead," said Miss Cunningham to a Bulletin representative, and it would not surprise me at all to hear that his body had been found in some of the ponds near the Pettis place or in the heavily wooded country in that section.

John had been in his possession last week. He told me so, and though he did not show it to me, I have no doubt that he told the truth. Last Friday evening after his last interview with Miss Sibyl, at the barn when he was hitching her horse for what proved to be his last drive home from school, he came into the house in a rage and expressed his wrath not only against the pretty teacher that he had so long looked upon with covetous eyes, but as well against the members of her family.

"Did he threaten to do violence to either Miss Sibyl or her father?" was asked.

Sick of Living.
"He did not," Miss Cunningham replied, "but he raved about the members of the Pettis family and said things about Sibyl such as I had never heard him say before. He said, among other things, that she was the poorest teacher in the town of Thompson, though previously he had always considered her the best. He told me that he was going to live and that he leads me to believe that he had planned self-destruction to follow the commission of the crime probably already taking shape in his mind."

Probably Repulsed by Teacher.
While Miss Cunningham has no means of knowing what was said between Sibyl and Elliott while he was hitching the girl's horse, she was inclined to agree that Elliott may have proposed marriage to her or at least had made known his affections and had been repulsed, for while he came in he declared to Miss Cunningham that he would have no more to do with the work of caring for Miss Pettis' children, and that he was going against the teacher and her parents.

Saturday afternoon Miss Cunningham paid Pettis for his month's work, as was her custom, and he left at about 7 o'clock, saying that he was going to Putnam to visit with a relative. Instead he went to Putnam and bought another revolver, though he already possessed three and an abundance of ammunition.

Showed Revolvers to Miss Pettis.
"One day I saw him showing his revolvers to Miss Pettis," Miss Cunningham said, "and I think he asked her to fire one of them, though she did not accept the invitation. He seemed to think a great deal of her, though he never said much to me about her."

"Did he ever seem interested in other girls?"
"Oh, yes, he liked all of the girls that ever came here to visit," and Miss Cunningham's smile as she said it indicated the truth of what many others who knew him well declare about him—that he was "girl crazy."

On the Murderer's Trail.
There were very few developments of special moment in the case Wednesday.

The feeling against Elliott continued to run high, but the number of his pursuers had dwindled considerably from the high total of Tuesday afternoon. Stern faced men were being rushed about the country in high-powered automobiles, however, and should some of the men who are on Elliott's trail—neighbors in the Quade section where the Pettis home is located—locate the man and meet with the slightest show of resistance, Elliott will be brought in by an undertaker and not by an officer of the law. There are men after him who would kill him and welcome the opportunity—with less compunction than they would feel in disposing of a rat.

Clues in number came to his pursuers during Wednesday, but none of them proved of much avail. Practically every report heard some officers think every last one of them—that Elliott has been seen since the time when his leering face last looked upon Mrs. Pettis from around the corner of the ice house as he was making his way off the Pettis property are the children of nervous persons' imagination or the yarns of some of the notoriety seekers.

State Police Active.
Captain Robert T. Hurley of the state police and Sheriff Charles A. Gates of Willimantic were officers that kept the hunt for Elliott during Wednesday. Returning to Putnam in the afternoon they heard of a report that the murderer had been seen near the eastern line of the town of Killingly and left there to join with a posse that was using police dogs from Henri I. Baer's place to scout that section. This clue, like the others, netted no positive return.

Crowd Visits Pettis Place.
At the Pettis place Wednesday there was a constant stream of sightseers, automobile parties from numerous surrounding towns and cities, police officials, posse members, newspaper men and the merely curious.

Mrs. Pettis' condition was considerably improved over what it was during Tuesday, though her sleep during the night following the murder had been disturbed by what proved to be a flash of the ridiculous in the grimmest of tragedies.

Unnecessary Firing.
During the early hours of Tuesday evening shot rang out not a great distance from the Pettis home and the sound threw Mrs. Pettis into a high state of nervousness. Clifford Greene, a neighbor and a man with all the nerve anyone needs to possess, went out to investigate. A distance down the lonely highway he found another neighbor, patrolling up and down. This neighbor admitted that he had fired the shot and explained that he had done so to frighten Elliott away. He was induced to stop such methods of chasing away the murderer, who may have been miles away, but an hour or so later again did more shooting, following which Mr. Greene went down and relieved him of his gun and sent him to the house, sending for another man to slip up with him for the remainder of the night.

Double Funeral Today.
The funeral of Mr. Pettis and his daughter is set for this afternoon. Miss Pettis was a singer in the Congregational church choir in Thompson and her pastor, Rev. J. W. Moore, will conduct the double funeral service. The bodies will be buried in the Grove street cemetery.

Theory of the Handcuffs.
Officers who have been at work on the murder case for the past two days have collected considerable information as to Elliott's actions during Monday. He bought a revolver here on that day and left the city Monday evening at 8.30 in an automobile hired at the Palace garage. The car took him out to near the Pettis place and set him down. He had with him at the time the hand bag containing the guns, dynamite, handcuffs and other things that are now in the possession of Sheriff W. N. Bates of Thompson, who has been very active in the hunt for the murderer.

The presence of the handcuffs in Elliott's bag have resulted in the development of the theory that he intended to kill the girl's father and mother that he might then possess the daughter, handcuffing her and taking her away forcibly if necessary.

Degenerate Murdered Rhode Island Girl.
It was stated at the Pettis place Wednesday afternoon that Elliott's former crime, for which he served six years in the Cranston, R. I. state prison, was committed at Naugatuck, R. I. He shot another girl, about twenty years ago, for the same reason that he took the life of Miss Pettis and her father—refusal to consider him as a partner in matrimony, something, one who knows him well says, no girl of any respectability or decency would consider for a single instant.
